30 September 1915

Dear Mr. President,

I have just returned to London from a short visit to the States necessitated by the sudden death of my New York Manager.

I shall be very happy to act as English publisher for the Toronto University Press in the way you suggest upon the same terms as I publish the books issued by several American University Presses. These terms are that the books are delivered to me in London carriage paid, and that I account at half the British published price for all the copies I sell. They would be announced in my catalogues free of charge, and would receive the general advantages of my publicity arrangements through my various depots throughout the world; but the cost of advertising in the newspapers, or of separate prospectuses, would be a matter for special arrangement between the two presses.

I am assuming that I should be free to sell the books in any part of the world outside Canada, with the exception perhaps of the United States in the case of some books, and that I should have the sole right of acting as your agent.

Would my Toronto Branch be at liberty to sell copies ?

Yours very truly,

H. S. Milford

The President,
